

"The Politics of Green Protectionism - explaining EU and Japanese responses to rising solar imports "

Dr. Llewelyn Hughes

Tuesday August 5, 2014, 16:00-17:30
Ihnestrasse 22, Room 3.1c, Freie Univ. Berlin

Dr. Llewelyn Hughes is a senior lecturer at the Crawford School of Public Policy at the Australian National University. His interests lie in business-government relations and non-market strategy, with an empirical focus on the energy and environmental sectors. His book, Globalizing Oil, was recently published through the Business and Public Policy series with Cambridge University Press. He has also published on public investment in green technologies, US energy policy, regionalism and climate change, the politics of Japanese nuclear energy, and resource nationalism in the Asia-Pacific. Prior to joining the faculty at the ANU, Dr. Hughes was an Assistant Professor of International Affairs at George Washington University, and a research fellow in the Consortium for Energy Policy Research at the John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University. He is currently a visiting fellow at the Environmental Policy Research Centre (Forschungszentrums für Umweltpolitik) at Freie Universität Berlin. Dr. Hughes received his Ph.D. from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, his masters degree from the Graduate School of Law and Politics at the University of Tokyo, and a bachelors degree from the University of Melbourne, Australia.