John Ashton

„Green Growth and the Politics of Climate Security

John Ashton was appointed in June 2010 as William Hague's Special Representative for Climate Change. His role is to support Ministers in the Foreign Office, as well as in the Department of Energy and Climate Change, and in the Government more widely, in building a stronger political foundation for an effective global response to climate change. He has the personal title of Ambassador and direct access to the Foreign Secretary. He served the two previous Foreign Secretaries in the same capacity.
