Industrial Labor, Inequality and Mobility

12 November 18:00 – 19:30 (CEST)

Description:

Throughout its history, industry and industrial labor have played various roles in different societies all over the world. They have been and continue to be implicated in the production of value, in political constellations and in individual live making projects. In this explorative workshop we try to approach the question which patterns of mobility (spatially and socially) correspond to those different functions of industry and industrial labor. How do people, materials, money, and ideas move in the context of the factory? Which movements are facilitated and which are blocked? What moves industrial labor?

Speakers:

Görkem Akgöz: re:work – Work and Human Lifecycle in Global History

Christian Strümpell: Hamburg University

Mohamed Slim Ben Youssef: Institut de Recherche sur le Maghreb Contemporain (IRMC)

Goran Musić: University of Vienna
